

Ronnie Mann, Jr.

Operations and Program Manager
Institute for Defense and Business

mann@idb.org

Mr. Mann earned a BS in Business Administration from The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1985 and was commissioned into the Air Force through UNC's AFROTC program. Upon graduation from Navigator training, he served as an Electronic Warfare Officer with the 16th Special Operations Squadron flying the AC-130H Spectre Gunship and accumulated over 100 contingency flying hours in operations in Central America and Southwest Asia.

Following military service, he earned an MBA with a concentration in Information Systems and Operations Management at UNC-Greensboro in 1994. Since then, Mr. Mann has held a number of operations management positions in the textile, education, construction, and healthcare industries. Mann has worked with the IDB since June 2006 supporting the IDB's new initiatives and special projects ranging from traveling to Iraq in support of the Department of Defense's Task Force for Business and Stability Operations to compiling IDB's annual report.