

E. Allan Lind, Ph.D.

*James L. Vincent Distinguished
Professor of Leadership at the Fuqua
School of Business, Duke University*

E. Allan Lind is the James L. Vincent Distinguished Professor of Leadership at the Fuqua School of Business, Duke University.

His research interests include psychology of fairness and trust, reactions to authority, leadership, cross-cultural psychology, and the psychology of conflict resolution.

Prior to coming to Duke, Professor Lind did research on NATO command and control procedures, counter-terrorism, and law at the RAND Corporation, and he studied legal and judicial policy at the Federal Judicial Center and the American Bar Foundation. He has taught in Departments of Psychology at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, the University of Washington, and the University of New Hampshire. He was a Regents Visiting Scholar at the University of California at Berkeley, he held the Leiden University Fund Chair Visiting Professorship in Social Conflict and Social Justice in The Netherlands, and he was a Visiting Professor of Leadership Studies at the University of Auckland in New Zealand.

Professor Lind has published more than 100 research papers in major scholarly journals. His book with Tom Tyler on the psychology of procedural fairness is one of the most cited works in his home field of social psychology. He is a Fellow of the Association of Psychological Sciences, the Society for Experimental Social Psychology, the Society for Personality and Social Psychology, and the American Psychological Association.

He received his PhD and MA from the University of North Carolina and his BA from the University of Florida.