

Ash Soni, DBA

*Executive Associate
Dean of Academic Programs & The SungKyunKwan
Professor Kelley
School of Business,
Indiana University*

Ash Soni is the Executive Associate Dean of Academic Programs, and holds the SungKyunKwan Professorship. He has also served as the Associate Dean for Information Technology and the Chairperson of the Operations and Decision Technologies Department. He has been on the faculty at the Kelley School since 1981.

Professor Soni's primary teaching interests are in business analytics and supply chain management. He is one of the lead instructors for the Kelley Business Analytics Certificate Programs, he also teaches Business Analytics in Kelley's Executive MBA Programs and the Kelley Direct Online MBA Program. He is the recipient of more than 20 teaching awards. His current research interests are in supply chain modeling, business analytics modeling, and decision support systems.

Professor Soni received his education first in the United Kingdom with a B.S. in Aeronautical Engineering from Manchester University and an M.S. in Operations Research from Strathclyde University. Later, he completed an MBA and a Doctorate in Quantitative Business Analysis and Operations Management at the Kelley School of Business. Prior to graduate work at Indiana University, he was a management consultant in the United Kingdom for four years.